Threatened Oceans

Rising Temperatures

Between 2017 and 2020, average global surface temperature rose approximately 1.1°C higher than pre-industrial levels. The greatest increase in the ocean temperature of surface waters is about 0.3°C per decade.

What are the major changes in climate, and how do they relate to the indicators? What do you think the impact?

The increased temperature causes the ocean to expand, which raises sea levels. It also causes the ocean to become more acidic, which can harm marine life.

Research that will be carried out to monitor the warming of the ocean.
