Time Space And Things:

Time, Space and Things B. K. Ridley, 1976 Time-Space Compression Barney Warf, 2008-03-03 If geography is the study of how human beings are stretched over the earth's surface a vital part of that process is how we know and feel about space and time. Although space and time appear as natural and outside of society they are in fact social constructions every society develops different ways of measuring, organizing and perceiving them. Given steady increases in the volume and velocity of social transactions over space, time and space have steadily shrunk via the process of time space compression. By changing the time space prisms of daily life, how people use their times and spaces, the opportunities and constraints they face, the meanings they attach to them, time space compression is simultaneously cultural, social, political and psychological in nature. This book explores how various social institutions and technologies historically generated enormous improvements in transportation and communications that produced transformative reductions in the time and cost of interactions among places, creating ever-changing geographies of centrality and peripherality. Warf invokes a global perspective on early modern, late modern and postmodern capitalism. He makes use of data concerning travel times at various historical junctures, maps of distances between places at different historical moments, anecdotal analyses based on published accounts of people's sense of place, examinations of cultural forms that represented space, e.g. paintings and quotes about the culture of speed. Warf shows how time space compression varies under different historical and geographical conditions, indicating that it is not one single homogenous process but a complex, contingent and contested one. This book will be a useful book for those studying and researching Geography, History, Sociology and Political Science as well as Anthropology and Philosophy.

The Question Concerning the Thing Martin Heidegger, 2018-10-24 The Question Concerning the Thing presents a full English translation of a lecture course first delivered by Heidegger at Freiburg University during the Winter Semester of 1935-36, originally published in German as volume 41 of the Gesamtausgabe. The text presents with particular clarity Heidegger's distinctive approach to issues of general philosophical interest. Heidegger shows how a litany of classical metaphysical problems flow from the basic question, 'what is a thing,' revealing the historicity of these problems and thus the ways in which they implicate further issues of cultural significance. He examines issues regarding the history and philosophy of science, philosophy of language and logic that are still debated today. Moreover, the lecture course as a whole is framed by questions regarding the nature of philosophy itself. Along the way, Heidegger provides sensitive and often provocative discussions of historically significant figures, in particular Kant.
