Woman On Death Row:

Death Row Women Mark Gado, 2007-11-30 During the 20th century only six women were legally executed by the State of New York at Sing Sing Prison In each case the condemned faced a process of demonization and public humiliation that was orchestrated by a powerful and unforgiving media When compared to the media treatment of men who went to the electric chair for similar offenses the press coverage of female killers was ferocious and unrelenting Granite woman black eyed Borgia roadhouse tramp sex mad and lousy prostitute are just some of the terms used by newspapers to describe these women Unlike their male counterparts females endured a campaign of expulsion and disgrace before they were put to death Not since the 1950s has New York put another woman to death Gado chronicles the crimes the times and the media attention surrounding these cases The tales of these death row women shed light on the death penalty as it applies to women and the role of the media in both the trials and executions of these convicts In these cases the press affected the prosecutions the judgements and the decisions of authorities along the way Contemporary headlines of the era are revealing in their blatant bias and leave little doubt of their purpose Using family letters prison correspondence photographs court transcripts and last minute pleas for mercy Gado paints a fuller picture of these cases and the times

Women and Capital Punishment in the United States David V. Baker, 2015-12-07 The history of the execution of women in the United States has largely been ignored and scholars have given scant attention to gender issues in capital punishment This historical analysis examines the social political and economic contexts in which the justice system has put women to death revealing a pattern of patriarchal domination and female subordination The book includes a discussion of condemned women granted executive clemency and judicial commutations an inquiry into women falsely convicted in potentially capital cases and a profile of the current female death row population

Women on the Row Kathleen A. O'Shea, 2000 Kathleen O Shea didn't set out looking for connections with women on death row She wanted information about them who they are the ways in which they live from day to day I was writing a sociological reference book she tells us a fairly safe fairly emotionless endeavor As she got to know the incarcerated women she was studying however what became clear to her were not their differences but how in so many ways she and the women in prison were the same Arguably Kathleen O Shea is the only person to have contacted every woman currently in U S prisons with a death sentence Women On The Row Revelations From Both Sides of the Bars is her honest startling sometimes raw sometimes radiant exploration of the places where doing heavy time and being free overlap Neither a treatise against the death penalty nor an apologia for female innocence Women On The Row focuses on the interconnectedness of women's lives The author creates memorable composite portraits of ten death row women based on her conversations with them on information that has been given to her and juxtaposes vignettes from her own life outside for a call and response across realities She reflects on her encounters with condemned women and how their stories illuminate her own In the process she gives us creative nonfiction with the power to challenge deeply held assumptions BOOK JACKET

Women and the Death Penalty in the United States, 1900-1998 Kathleen O'Shea, 1999-02-28 Using a historical framework this book offers not only the penal history of the death penalty in the states that have given women the death penalty but it also retells the stories of the women who have been executed and those currently awaiting their fate on death row This work takes a historical look at women and the death penalty in the United States from 1900 to 1998 It gives the reader a look at the penal codes in the various states regarding the death penalty and the personal stories of women who have been executed or who are currently on death row As Americans continue to debate the enforcement of the death penalty the issues of race and gender as they relate to the death penalty are also debated This book offers a unique perspective to a recurring sociopolitical issue

Proof of Guilt Kathleen A. Cairns, 2013-05-01 Barbara Graham might have been a diabolical dame in a hard boiled detective story beautiful sexy and deadly Charged alongside two male friends in the murder of an elderly widow during a botched robbery attempt Bloody Babs became the third woman executed in California after a 1953 trial that played out before standing room only crowds captured the imaginations of journalists filmmakers and death penalty opponents Why Kathleen A Cairns asks of all the capital cases in the twentieth century did Graham s have such political resonance and staying power Leaving aside the question of guilt or innocence debated to this day Cairns examines how Graham s case became a touchstone in the ongoing debate over capital punishment While prosecutors positioned the accused woman as a femme fatale the media came to offer a counternarrative for Graham s life highlighting her abusive and lonely beginnings Cairns shows how Graham s case became crucial to the abolitionists of the time who used instances of questionable guilt to raise awareness of the arbitrary and capricious nature of death penalty prosecutions Critical in keeping capital punishment in the forefront of public consciousness until abolitionists homed in on a winning strategy Graham s case illustrates the power of individual stories to shape wider perceptions and ultimately public policies
