Serious Fun at a Jewish Community Summer Camp Celia E. Rothenberg, 2016-07-01 Unique in the literature on Jewish camping this book provides an in depth study of a community based residential summer camp that serves Jewish children from primarily rural areas Focused on Camp Ben Frankel CBF established in 1950 in southern Illinois this book focuses on how a pluralist Jewish camp constructs meaningful experiences of Jewish family and Judaism for campers and teaches them about Israel Inspired by models of the earliest camps established for Jewish children in urban areas CBF s founders worked to create a camp that would appeal to the rural often isolated Jewish families in its catchment area Although seemingly on the periphery of American Jewish life CBF staff and campers are revealed to be deeply entwined with national developments in Jewish culture and practice and indeed contributors to shaping them This research highlights the importance of campers experiences of traditional elements of the Jewish family an experience increasingly limited to time at camp as well as the overarching importance of song Over the years Judaism becomes constructed as fun welcoming and easy for campers while Israel is presented in ways that are meant to be appropriate for a community camp In the camp s earliest decades Israel was framed by traditional Zionist discourse later as community priorities shifted the cause of Russian Jews was the focus Most recently as Israeli politics have been increasingly viewed as potentially divisive the camp has adopted an Israel lite approach focusing on Israel as the Biblical homeland of the Jewish people and a place home to Jews who are similar to American Jews In sum this study sheds light on how a small rural community camp contributes in significant ways to our understanding of American Jews their Judaism and their Zionism

Developing an All-School Model for Elementary Integrative Music Learning Carol E. Reed-Jones, 2014-03 The purpose of this study was to investigate the potential for increasing informal music making in elementary school culture and create a model of such music making Precedence for this model can be found in the literature of ethnomusicology educational psychology and learning theory multicultural music education and cultural anthropology Literature from four distinct traditions and contexts of music making in integrative sociocultural contexts sub Saharan African ngoma and Community Music as manifested in New Orleans second lines old time music and dance and summer camp music making was parsed with a philosophical lens to determine and assess possible areas of intersection between these four participatory cultures and North American public school culture Each of these five areas was examined through a comprehensive review of literature to define their salient characteristics. These characteristics were sorted to determine commonalities between areas and the zones of intersection became the basis for a speculative model of integrative music learning featuring the inclusion of musical opportunities and interludes throughout the school day thus taking school music beyond the confines of the music room. Instruction in music classes would still continue enhanced in this model by supplemental learning opportunities inspired by the informal learning of traditional world musics, the participatory practice of New Orleans second line parades, old time music and dance, and summer camp music culture. This model of integrative learning is also informed by current educational best practices such as child centered learning, peer tutoring, experiential learning, and multicultural perspectives. It acknowledges the diversity of traditions consulted while aiming for the unity in their seemingly disparate disciplines. Five universal characteristics were uncovered in the search for areas of intersection between North American elementary school culture, child culture, ngoma music making, and Community Music style music making in New Orleans, old time music and dance, and summer camp contexts: a) Song, b) play, c) informal learning as evidenced by oral tradition, peer tutoring, self learning, d) kinesthetic learning, and e) contextualized learning as evidenced in the sociocultural uses of music and situated learning. This model strives for the enactment of school music as a vital and integral part of daily school culture.

Language, the Singer and the Song Richard J. Watts, Franz Andres Morrissey, 2019-01-31. The relationship between language and music has much in common: rhythm, structure, sound, metaphor. Exploring the phenomena of song and performance, this book presents a sociolinguistic model for analysing them. Based on ethnomusicologist John Blacking's contention that any song performed communally is a folk song, regardless of its generic origins, it argues that folk song, to a far greater extent than other song genres, displays communal or inclusive types of performance. The defining feature of folk song as a multi-modal instantiation of music and language is its participatory nature, making it ideal for sociolinguistic analysis. In this sense, a folk song is the product of specific types of developing social interaction whose major purpose is the construction of a temporally and locally based community. Through repeated instantiations, this can lead to disparate communities of practice which over time develop sociocultural registers and a communal stance towards aspects of meaningful events in everyday lives that become typical of a discourse community.

Community Music at the Boundaries Lee Willingham, 2021-04-06. Music lives where people live. Historically, music study has centred on the conservatory which privileges the study of the Western European canon and Western European practice. The Eurocentric way music has been studied has excluded communities that are considered to be marginalized in one or more ways despite that the majority of human experiences with music is found outside of that realm. Community music has emerged as a counter narrative to the hegemonic music canon; it seeks to increase the participation of those living on the boundaries. Community Music at the Boundaries explores music and music making on those edges. The real power of community music, writes Roger Mauthe in the foreword, lies not in the fiction of trying to eliminate boundaries or pretending they don't exist, but in embracing the challenge of walking them Contributions from scholars and researchers music practitioners and administrators examine the intersection of music and communities in a variety of music making forms ensembles university and police choirs bands prison performing groups youth music groups instrument classes symphonies drum circles and musical direction and performance Some of the topics explored in the volume include education and change music and Indigenous communities health and wellness music by incarcerated persons and cultural identity By shining a light on boundaries this volume provides a wealth of international perspectives and knowledge about the ways that music enhances lives
