Conflict and the Plot of Matthew Robert Charles Branden, 2006 Recent gospel studies have capitalized on the advance in scholarship of narrative criticism Conversely gospel studies have suffered from a general lack of appreciation for and application of first century demonology in Judaism A combination of these two critical tools sheds great light not only on the plot of Matthew but also on the understanding of selected problem passages The success of this approach makes Satanic Conflict and the Plot of Matthew an indispensable method of gospel criticism Catholic Moral Theology and Social Ethics Christina Astorga, 2013-12-01 Proposing a new method for moral theology Christina Astorga seeks to recast our understanding of the discipline by drawing from the faith vision of the entire theological enterprise including scripture

dogmatic theology social ethics and spirituality Characterization in the Gospels David Rhoads, Kari Syreeni, 1999-01-01
This volume examines characterization in the four Gospels and in the Sayings Gospel Q. Peter in Matthew, Lazarus in John, and Jesus as Son of Man in Q are examples of the characters studied. The general approach is narrative critical. At the same time each contribution takes special effort to widen the scope beyond the narrated world to include the text's ideological and real life setting as well as its effective history. New ways of doing narrative criticism are thus proposed. The concluding essay by David Rhoads delineates the development and envisions the future of narrative criticism in Gospel studies.

Men and Women in the Fourth Gospel Colleen M. Conway, 1999 Hearing the New Testament Joel B. Green, 2010-03-10
A distinguished group of scholars here introduces and illustrates the array of strategies and methods used in New Testament study today. Standard approaches: text criticism, historical methods, etc. appear side by side with newer approaches: narrative criticism, Latino/Latina hermeneutics, theological interpretation of the New Testament, and more. First published in 1995, Hearing the New Testament is now revised and updated, including rewritten chapters, new chapters, and new suggestions for further reading. Contributors: Efrain Agosto, Loveday C. A. Alexander, James L. Bailey, Stephen C. Barton, Richard Bauckham, C. Clifton Black, Holly J. Carey, Bart D. Ehrman, Stephen E. Fowl, Joel B. Green, Richard B. Hays, Mark Allan Powell, Emerson B. Powery, F. Scott Spencer, Max Turner, Kevin J. Vanhoozer, Robert W. Wall.

A Personal Narrative of the Outbreak and Massacre at Cawnpore W. J. Shepherd, 1879 Reconfiguring Mark's Jesus Scott S. Elliott, 2011
As readers we are captivated by the resemblance of literary characters to actual persons. But it is precisely this illusion that allows characterization to play host to dominant ideologies of both literature and the self. This is especially true when we confuse narrative figures and historical persons. Over the last thirty years, New Testament narrative criticism has developed into a major methodological approach in Biblical Studies. But for all its ingenuity and promise, it has been reluctant to let go of conventional historical critical moorings. As a result, one is hard pressed to find any substantive difference between reconstructions of the historical Jesus and narrative critical readings of the character Jesus. Reconfiguring Mark's Jesus endeavors to reorient and advance narrative criticism by analysing the Gospel of Mark's characterization of the figure of Jesus in relation to three other fundamental aspects of narrative discourse: focalization, dialogue, and plot. This intertextual reading, in which Mark is set alongside two ancient novels, Leucippe and Clitophon and The Life of Aesop, problematizes implicitly modern notions of literary characters as autonomous agents, as well as naturalizing treatments of literary characters as historical referents. Highlighting the inherent ambiguity of narrative discourse, particularly with regard to referentiality, human agency, and the complex relationship between literature and history, Reconfiguring Mark's Jesus illustrates the diverse and complex ways that narratives of necessity produce fragmented characters that refract the inherent paradoxes of narrative itself and of human subjectivity.
