Words For Women:

Womanwords Jane Mills,1989 God's Words, Women's Voices Rosalynn Voaden,1999 Visions and prophecy offered medieval women one of the few pathways to authority in religious and in some cases political life The ecclesiastical doctrine of discretio spirituum was a means of testing whether visions were truly of divine origin the gift of revelation was not seen to make a woman less dangerous or ready to deceive and the conjunction of deceitful women and deceiving visions demanded stringent checks and controls by ecclesiastical authorities This book first explores discretio spirituum in the Revelaciones of St Bridget of Sweden and suggests that Bridget was clearly aware of the rules and eager to present her experiences as impeccably orthodox in contrast the ambivalent reception of Margery Kempe and her Book is shown to be due to her inconsistent conformity to the doctrine The consequences of failure to conform could be severe Marguerite Porete and Joan of Arc were burned at the stake ostensibly because their visions were deemed to be of demonic origin Words of Weight on the Woman Question A.
