Methodology of Narrative Structural Analysis*

Present-day analysts of narrative structure, working in the tradition of Propp and other formalists, have succeeded in effecting many improvements in the concepts and techniques of their predecessors. However, in one respect at least, they have not advanced beyond the work of Propp in that they continue to by-pass what may be termed the 'textual surface' of narratives, i. e. the constituent sentences of the narrative text as it is presented to the reader (hearer).¹ One manifestation of this neglect is that analysts take as their point of departure, not the text itself of a given narrative, but rather a synopsis of the text. For instance, Tzvetan Todorov, in his recently published study of the Decameron (1969: 16), explicitly states that he deals more with synopses of the stories than with the stories themselves.²

This practice can be justified in that it reflects the correct intuition that narrative structure is, in a sense, 'independent' of the linguistic means by which it is manifested. More exactly stated, there are a number of respects in which the underlying narrative structure differs from the textual surface. Perhaps the most important difference is in the disparity between

* A shorter version of this paper was presented, under a different title, at the 1971 Linguistic Institute, State University of New York at Buffalo, during Narrative Analysis Week, August 16-20.

¹ Propp (1968: 113) considered choice of linguistic means one of the areas in which the storyteller is free to create, and thus "not subject to the morphologist's study". Lévi-Strauss has asserted (1955: 431) that "Myth is the part of language where the formula traduttore, traditore reaches its lowest truth value ... Its [myth's] substance does not lie in its style, its original music or its syntax, but in the story which it tells."

² That this is also a common practice of Lévi-Strauss has been noted by several commentators, e.g. Hendricks (1967: 42-43), and Maybury-Lewis (1969: 117).

Structural Analysis of Narrative, 1976-01-01 Structural Analysis of Narrative Jean Calloud, 1976 Jean Calloud introduces the biblical student to the structural analysis of A J Greimas in this study of the temptation narrative Greimas rather technical vocabulary and his rigorous procedure are presented without any loss of accuracy yet simply enough that the reader does not need to have a previous grounding in structural theory Greimas structuralism is one of the most recent and impressive of the many attempts to bring a strictly scientific method to bear on the study of man It is distinguished by its effort to let language bear its own full weight as it is subject to rigorous analysis after a short sketch of the theory Calloud works step by step through the narrative of Jesus temptation showing first its basic structure and then presenting its semantic contents Publisher The Structural Analysis of Narrative Texts Andrej Kodjak, Michael J.
