

THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF Human Rights

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights is a document that sets out the basic rights and freedoms that every person has, no matter where they live. It was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948. The document is written in two languages, English and French, and is the foundation for many international human rights treaties and national constitutions.

The Declaration consists of 30 articles that cover a wide range of rights, including the right to life, liberty, and security of person; the right to a fair trial; the right to freedom of expression; the right to work; and the right to education. It also states that all rights are equal and that everyone has the right to life, liberty, and security of person.

The Declaration is a key document in the field of human rights and is widely cited by human rights organizations and governments. It is also a source of inspiration for many people who are working to improve the lives of others.
