distant future we can expect a world where humans and robots coexist and interact with each other For this to occur we need to understand human traits such as seeing hearing thinking speaking etc and institute these traits in robots The most essential feature necessary for robots to achieve is that of integrative multimedia understanding IMU which occurs naturally in humans It allows us to assimilate pieces of information expressed through different modes such as speech pictures gestures etc The book describes how robots acquire traits like natural language understanding NLU as the central part of IMU Mental image directed semantic theory MIDST is its core and is based on the hypothesis that NLU is essentially the processing of mental image associated with natural language expressions namely mental image based understanding MBU MIDST is intended to model omnisensory mental image in human and to afford a knowledge representation system in order for integrative management of knowledge subjective to cognitive mechanisms of intelligent entities such as humans and robots based on a mental image model visualized as Loci in Attribute Spaces and its description language Lmd mental image description language to be employed for predicate logic with a systematic scheme for symbol grounding This language works as an interlingua among various kinds of information media and has been applied to several versions of the intelligent system interlingual understanding model aiming at general system IMAGES Its latest version i e conversation management system CMS simulates MBU and comprehends the user s intention through dialogue to find and solve problems and finally provides a response in text or animation The book is aimed at researchers and students interested in artificial intelligence robotics and cognitive science Based on philosophical considerations the methodology will also have an appeal in linguistics psychology ontology geography and cartography Key Features Describes the methodology to provide robots with human like
