The Anglo-Irish Novel and the Big House Vera Kreilkamp,1998-10-01 This book is a comprehensive study of the ascendancy novel from Maria Edgeworth's Castle Rackrent 1800 through contemporary reinventions of the form Kreilkamp argues that Irish fiction needs to be rescued from the critical assumptions underlying attacks on the historical mythologies of Yeats and the Literary Revival Exploring the uniquely Irish dimensions of colonial and post colonial societies Kreilkamp charts the self critical formulations of a gentry culture facing its extinction more often and more successfully with comic irony than nostalgia Kreilkamp positions the Big House novels within current debates in postcolonial criticism and theory She argues that these fictional representations of a beleaguered society provide a complex nuanced gaze into a hybrid colonial group that distanced itself from the self aggrandizements of the revivalists As she examines the gothic revisionist and postmodern permutations of an enduring national form she illustrates the ways ascendancy women transformed conventions of an English domestic genre into political fiction Her attention to Edgeworth's Irish works the fiction of the neglected Victorian novelist Charles Lever and the gothic forms of the Big House by Sheridan Le Fanu and Charles Maturin provide a historical context for later reformulations of the genre by Somerville and Ross Elizabeth Bowen Molly Keane William Trevor Jennifer Johnston Aidan Higgins and John Banville

Uncle Silas J. Le Fanu,2006-11-30 One of the most significant and intriguing Gothic novels of the Victorian period and is enjoyed today as a modern psychological thriller In UNCLE SILAS 1864 Le Fanu brought up to date Mrs Radcliffe's earlier tales of virtue imprisoned and menaced by unscrupulous schemers The narrator Maud Ruthyn is a 17 year old orphan left in the care of her fearful uncle Silas Together with his boorish son and a sinister French governess Silas plots to kill Maud and claim her fortune The novel established Le Fanu as a master of horror fiction

London publisher Richard Bentley Several changes were made from the serialization to the volume edition such as resolving the inconsistencies of names

Uncle Silas J. Sheridan Le Fanu, 2012-04-16 The novel is a first person narrative told from the point of view of the teenaged Maud Ruthyn an heiress living with her somber reclusive father Austyn Ruthyn in their mansion at Knowl She gradually becomes aware of the existence of Silas Ruthyn a black sheep uncle whom she has never met who was once an infamous rake and gambler but is now apparently a reformed Christian Silas's past holds a dark mystery which she gradually learns from her father and from her worldly cheerful cousin Lady Monica the suspicious suicide of a man to whom Silas owed an enormous gambling debt which took place within a locked apparently impenetrable room in Silas's mansion at Bartram Haugh Austyn is firmly convinced of his brother's innocence Maud's attitude to Uncle Silas whom we do not meet for the first 200 pages of the book wavers repeatedly between trusting in her father's judgment and growing fear and uncertainty In the first part of the novel Maud's father hires a French governess Madame de la Rougierre as a companion for her Madame de la Rougierre however turns out to be a sinister figure who has designs on Maud In a cutaway scene that breaks the first person narrative we learn that she is in league with Uncle Silas's good for nothing son Dudley She is eventually discovered by Maud in the act of burgling her father's desk this is enough to ensure that she is dismissed Austyn Ruthyn obscurely asks Maud if she is willing to undergo some kind of ordeal to clear Silas's name She assents and shortly thereafter her father dies It turns out that he has added a codicil to his will Maud is to stay with Uncle Silas until she comes of age If she dies while in her minority the estate will go to Silas Despite the best efforts of Lady Monica and Austyn's executor and fellow Swedenborgian Dr Bryerly Maud is forced to spend the next three and a half years of her life at Bartram Haugh Life at Bartram Haugh is initially strange but not unpleasant despite ominous signs such as the uniformly unfriendly servants and a malevolent factotum of Silas's the one legged Dickon Hawkes Silas himself is a sinister soft spoken man who is openly contemptuous of his two children the loutish Dudley and the untutored but friendly Milly her country ways initially amaze Maud but they become best friends Silas is subject to mysterious catatonic fits which are attributed by his doctor to his massive opium consumption Gradually however the trap closes around Maud it is clear that Silas is attempting to coax or force her to marry Dudley When that plan fails and as the time limit of three and a half years begins to shrink it becomes clear that more violent methods may be used to ensure that Silas gains control of the Ruthyn estate

Uncle Silas Sheridan Le Fanu, 2020-06-03 In Uncle Silas Sheridan Le Fanu's most celebrated novel Maud Ruthyn the young naive heroine is plagued by Madame de la Rougierre from the moment the enigmatic older woman is hired as her governess A liar bully and spy when Madame leaves the house she takes her dark secret with her But when Maud is orphaned she is sent to live with her Uncle Silas her father s mysterious brother and a man with a scandalous even murderous past And once again she encounters Madame whose sinister role in Maud s destiny becomes all too clear With its subversion of reality and illusion and its exploration of fear through the use of mystery and the supernatural Uncle Silas shuns the conventions of traditional horror and delivers a chilling psychological thriller It was winter that is about the second week in November and great gusts were rattling at the windows and wailing and thundering among our tall trees and ivied chimneys a very dark night and a very cheerful fire blazing a pleasant mixture of good round coal and spluttering dry wood in a genuine old fireplace in a sombre old room Black wainscoting glimmered up to the ceiling in small ebony panels a cheerful clump of wax candles on the tea table many old portraits some grim and pale others pretty and some very graceful and charming hanging from the walls Few pictures except portraits long and short were there On the whole I think you would have taken the room for our parlour It was not like our modern notion of a drawing room It was a long room too and every way capacious but irregularly shaped A girl of a little more than seventeen looking I believe younger still slight and rather tall with a great deal of golden hair dark grey eyed and with a countenance rather sensitive and melancholy was sitting at the tea table in a reverie I was that girl The only other person in the room the only person in the house related to me was my father He was Mr Ruthyn of Knowl so called in his county but he had many other places was of a very ancient lineage who had refused a baronetage often and it was said even a viscounty being of a proud and defiant spirit and thinking themselves higher in station and purer of blood than two thirds of the nobility into whose ranks it was said they had been invited to enter Of all this family lore I knew but little and vaguely only what is to be gathered from the fireside talk of old retainers in the nursery I am sure my father loved me and I know I loved him With the sure instinct of childhood I apprehended his tenderness although it was never expressed in common ways But my father was an oddity He had been early disappointed in Parliament where it was his ambition to succeed Though a clever man he failed there where very inferior men did extremely well Then he went abroad and became a connoisseur and a collector took a part on his return in literary and scientific institutions and also in the foundation and direction of some charities But he tired of this mimic government and gave himself up to a country life not that of a sportsman but rather of a student staying sometimes at one of his places and sometimes at another and living a secluded life Rather late in life he married and his beautiful young wife died leaving me their only child to his care This bereavement I have been told changed him made him more odd and taciturn than ever and his temper also except to me more severe There was also some disgrace about his younger brother my uncle Silas which he felt bitterly

Uncle Silas A Tale of Bartram Haugh is an 1864 Victorian Gothic mystery thriller novel by the Irish writer J Sheridan Le Fanu Despite Le Fanu resisting its classification as such the novel has also been hailed as a work of sensation fiction by contemporary reviewers and modern critics alike It is an early example of the locked room mystery subgenre rather than a novel of the supernatural despite a few creepily ambiguous touches but does show a strong interest in the occult and in the ideas of Emanuel Swedenborg a Swedish scientist philosopher and Christian mystic An heiress becomes ward to her disreputable uncle with an unsavory past tainted by the apparent suicide of a man to whom he owed a large gambling debt and must help clear his name Victorian Sensations Kimberly Harrison, Richard Fantina, 2006 Wildly popular with Victorian readers sensation fiction was condemned by most critics for scandalous content and formal features that deviated from respectable Victorian realism Victorian Sensations is the first collection to examine sensation fiction as a whole showing it to push genre boundaries and resist easy classification Comprehensive in scope this collection includes twenty original essays employing various critical approaches to cover a range of topics that will interest many readers Essays are organized thematically into three sections issues of genre sensational representations of gender and sexuality and the texts complex readings of diverse social and cultural phenomena such as class race and empire The introduction reviews the critical reception of sensation fiction to situate these new essays within a larger scholarly context BOOK JACKET Uncle Silas Le Fanu, Joseph Sheridan, 2016-10-11 Uncle Silas is a Victorian Gothic mystery thriller novel by the Anglo Irish writer J Sheridan Le Fanu It is notable as one of the earliest examples of the locked room mystery subgenre It is not a novel of the supernatural despite a few creepily ambiguous touches but does show a strong interest in the occult and in the ideas of Swedenborg

Uncle Silas J. Sheridan Le Fanu, 2017-07-31 A story of great imaginative power superior to either of the former works by the same author The shadow on the first page on the story creeps slowly on until the terrible reality comes in sight like some old Greek tragedy A room a picture the entire house becomes instinct with significance under the touch of Mr Le Fanu The incidents in Uncle Silas are strong and strange and no detail here could give an idea of this remarkable and powerful novel The Athenaeum The best of Mr Le Fanu's novels Few persons who take Uncle Silas up will rest until they have read every word The Globe A highly wrought romance sustaining a very strong interest from the beginning to the end The Examiner Uncle Silas is a powerful and exciting book The vivid colors in which Uncle Silas is drawn his sweet gentle insufferable voice the bloodless face of marble with its long silver hair and wild opium eating eyes the elegant artificial style his conversation the white glare of the smile that makes you feel half insane are vivid elements in a picture not easy to forget It takes a real hold on the imagination We shall see Uncle Silas for many a day The Spectator Mr Le Fanu has placed himself by his new novel in the very first rank of modern novelists He is thoroughly original In his three novels he pursues a plan hitherto untried Each has its central figure mysterious and appealing around which minor characters are grouped Within the mind of Uncle Silas lies the whole train of circumstances As the acorn involves the oak so the character of Uncle Silas implies the whole action of the narrative Not that other characters are unimportant There is a wealth of portraiture and the very slightest sketch tells The skill with which Mr Le Fanu concentrates the attention on this man is perfectly unique The special characteristic of Uncle Silas as of the two former novels is its intensity Both character and incident are brought out with a strange vividness Press There have been few characters more finely drawn than that of Uncle Silas Wilkie Collins never manipulated incidents in his extraordinary stories with more care and consequent interest than does Mr Le Fanu Morning Star Vividly realized masterpiece The Outlook Undoubtedly the author of Uncle Silas possessed in a high degree the power of playing upon the nerves of his readers with sinister suggestions of shadowy perils emanating from evil human influences or ghostly monstrosities revenants vampires werewolves The Living Age The climax of the sensational beyond reason and comfortable daylight reading Atlantic Monthly Heywood and Son's Up-to-date Collection of Nigger Songs and Recitations Abel Heywood and Son,1865
