occur in nature and have been known for almost 250 years as aluminosilicate minerals Examples are clinoptilolite mordenite offretite ferrierite erionite and chabazite Today most of these and many other zeolites are of great interest in heterogeneous catalysis yet their naturally occurring forms are of limited value as catalysts because nature has not optimized their properties for catalytic applications and the naturally occurring zeolites almost always contain undesired impurity phases It was only with the advent of synthetic zeolites in the period from about 1948 to 1959 thanks to the pioneering work of R M Barrer and R M Milton that this class of porous materials began to play a role in catalysis A landmark event was the introduction of synthetic faujasites zeolite X at first zeolite Y slightly later as catalysts in fluid catalytic cracking FCC of heavy petroleum distillates in 1962 one of the most important chemical processes with a worldwide capacity of the order of 500 million t a Compared to the previously used amorphous silica alumina catalysts the zeolites were not only orders of magnitude more active which enabled drastic process engineering improvements to be made but they also brought about a significant increase in the yield of the target product viz motor gasoline With the huge FCC capacity worldwide the added value of this yield enhancement is of the order of 10 billion US per year Zeolites and Catalysis Jiri Cejka,Avelino

Zeolite Characterization and Catalysis Arthur W. Chester, E.G. Derouane, 2009-10-03 The idea for putting together a tutorial on zeolites came originally from my co editor Eric Derouane about 5 years ago I first met Eric in the mid 1980s when he spent 2 years working for Mobil R D at our then Corporate lab at Princeton NJ He was on the senior technical staff with projects in the synthesis and characterization of new materials At that time I managed a group at our Paulsboro lab that was responsible for catalyst characterization in support of our catalyst and process development efforts and also had a substantial group working on new material synthesis Hence our interests overlapped considerably and we met regularly After Eric moved back to Namur initially we maintained contact and in the 1990s we met a number of times in Europe on projects of joint interest It was after I retired from ExxonMobil in 2002 that we began to discuss the tutorial concept seriously Eric had semi retired and lived on the Algarve the southern coast of Portugal In January 2003 my wife and I spent 3 weeks outside of Lagos and I worked parts of most days with Eric on the proposed content of the book We decided on a comprehensive approach that ultimately amounted to some 20 chapters covering all of zeolite chemistry and catalysis and gave it the title Zeolite Chemistry and Catalysis An integrated Approach and Tutorial
