

GLOBE

Our planet is warming.

The sun's rays are in part reflected by clouds and snow surfaces and, therefore, heats up and, in turn, are (invisible to human eye), instead of may become "trapped" by very atmosphere, such as carbon dioxide.

What are the consequences?

The increase in Earth's temperatures causes the ice caps and glaciers to melt, which causes a rise in the sea level, changes more extreme weather (hurricanes and storms), the quantity and seasonality of rains, the flowering and growth times of plants (with serious consequences on agricultural) and ocean acidification (damaging coral reefs).

Where can these effects be seen?

The effects are evident not only in the polar regions but also in other areas of the planet. For example, some areas are becoming more and more arid, with possible serious consequences for ecosystems and the people who live there.

it's cold at the Poles

The Polar regions are found at the top and bottom of the Earth and they are called, whether placed on the top or the bottom, the North Pole and the South Pole. The only way to see any thing from the top of the globe and the bottom of the globe is by the eye can see. Only a few animals are tough enough to survive these conditions.

Ice Fact

Water expands when it freezes. This is why ice floats on water. It is also why ice can break through the surface of the ocean and freeze the water below.

The North and South poles are at the top and bottom of the Earth. Every 24 hours and around of the Earth, every 24 hours the Earth spins once around its axis. The sun Earth spins once that runs through the middle (core) of the Earth, from pole to pole.

The poles are covered in permanent ice and snow, and the animals that live in these areas are very hardy creatures. In these regions are changing rapidly because of climate change, and the animals that inhabit them struggle to survive.

How do animals and plants survive the polar climate?

All animals and plants that live in the polar regions have had to adapt to low temperatures. Animals generally have thick fur and layers of fat to survive the cold. Among these, the polar bear is the most famous, but there are also the reindeer, muskox, arctic fox, walrus and penguin.

Emperor Penguin

Emperor penguins are the only penguins that live in the Arctic. They are the largest of all penguins and are known for their ability to survive in the harshest conditions. They have a thick layer of fat and a special protein in their feathers that helps them stay warm. They also have a special adaptation called "feather ruffling" that helps them trap heat. Emperor penguins are also known for their long migrations and their ability to fast for months at a time.

LIFE

One of the most powerful Arctic hunters is the killer whale, or orca. It is not a true whale, but the largest kind of dolphin. Orcas live in groups and have a true language. They communicate with each other using sounds. They sleep with one eye open.
