What is Stress?

Stress is a natural response to a perceived threat or challenge. It is a complex reaction involving the brain, hormones, and the body's systems. Stress can be both good and bad, depending on the situation and the individual's ability to cope with it.

Types of Stress

Acute Stress: This is the most common type of stress, characterized by a short-term response to a specific event or situation. It is often described as the "fight or flight" response.

Chronic Stress: This type of stress is long-lasting and can be caused by ongoing situations or events. It can lead to a variety of health problems, including heart disease, depression, and anxiety.

Eustress: This is a positive form of stress that is caused by a challenge or a goal. It can help to improve performance and focus, and it is often associated with feelings of excitement and motivation.
