State Young People And Training:

Employment and Training Programs in the United States, 1981 United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Labor and Human Resources. Subcommittee on Employment and Productivity,1981

Differentiated Teaching and Learning in Youth Work Training Brian Belton,Simon Frost,2010-01-01 Brian Belton and Simon Frost provide a starting point for an approach and direction to teaching and learning in the context youth work education at the professional level While a good deal has been written about youth work practice material specifically devoted to the content and method of teaching of the discipline is scant At the same time all too often those involved professional youth work training find themselves absorbed into forums programme content and teaching and learning strategies not wholly suited to their specialist function or professional trajectory This has not helped the status of the profession or the development of best practice in the field As such Belton and Frost senior tutors in the UK s largest and leading institution the YMCA George Williams College in East London specifically devoted to the professional development of youth workers make a timely and authoritative endeavour to build a foundation on which this deficit might begin to be addressed This task is undertaken firstly by providing a cogent examination of differentiated teaching and learning forged with the training of professional youth workers held in tight focus This is followed by an exploration of the conduct purpose and ethical disposition of youth work practitioners via an analysis of a long debated question about the professional role do should we work with or on clients This consistently critical and questioning book represents a valuable resource to all those involved in teaching and evaluating youth work practice But it is also important asset for trainers across the horizon of people work social work nursing teaching etc and practitioners looking to maintain and develop their understanding and delivery of services

The State, Young People, and Youth Training Phil Mizen,1995 As the youth training movement has sought increasingly to process and control their aspirations for meaningful work and training they have consistently resisted these measures The result has been that rather than creating a new generation embracing the spirit of unfettered capitalism internalizing and rehearsing its imperatives and values and celebrating its institutional forms youth training has given rise to contradictions that have led to new forms of resistance and denial

Young People in Risk Society: The Restructuring of Youth Identities and Transitions in Late Modernity Mark Cieslik,Gary Pollock,2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2002 Loosely divided into two sections this book s first part includes chapters which explore young people s identities and youth cultures in relation to issues such as drug use education and dance music In various ways the authors examine whether there is a need to rethink the existing theories and concepts which have informed the study of youth cultures and identities The second part to the volume is concerned with how young people experience transtitions in relation to such topics as employment sexuality and household formation The chapters also raise theoretical questions on the usefulness of the transition concept in late modernity illustrating how the reshaping of key institutions in late modernity has had a profound effect on the sorts of transitions young people make today In addressing such issues the authors examine the potential contribution that concepts around risk and risk society and new Third Way social policy initiatives can have to contemporary youth studies Circular West Virginia University.
