Concours médical, 2001 Place des statines et des fibrates chez le sujet dyslipidémique Géraldine Carpentier, 2006 Les maladies cardiovasculaires première cause de mortalité dans les pays industrialisés représentent un véritable enjeu de santé publique La dyslipidémie en est un facteur de risque majeur La prise en charge du sujet dyslipidémique passe en première intention par une diététique adaptée Lorsque celle-ci est insuffisante on lui associe un traitement médicamenteux le plus souvent une statine ou un fibrate Une étude d'ordonnances sélectionnées sur plusieurs officines a permis de soulever de potentielles interactions faisant intervenir ces hypolipémiants Ce travail a montré notamment une place prépondérante des inhibiteurs du cytochrome P450 3A4 dans les interactions pharmacocliniques impliquant les statines Le risque accru de rhabdomyolyse a conduit alors le plus souvent un changement de la statine responsable par une autre

Au cours de ces dernières années les progrès réalisés dans la prévention et le traitement de l'infarctus du myocarde ont beaucoup valu du fait de l'utilisation thérapeutique des statines qui font sensiblement baisser le taux de cholestérol et par conséquent les risques cardiovasculaires Cette innovation a mis l'accent du même coup sur le rôle majeur joué par l'hypercholestérolémie dans la pathologie coronaire Issues d'une autre classe pharmaceutique les fibrates sont aujourd'hui utilisés dans le traitement des hypertriglycéridémies galement impliqués dans les maladies vasculaires Aussi étudie-t-on actuellement les possibilités d'association des fibrates et des statines dans le traitement des pathologies résistants Cet ouvrage passionnant rédigé par un des plus grands spécialistes français des maladies cardiovasculaires décrit ainsi les pratiques d'une médecine nouvelle. En finissant d'une part pour le court terme le recours à cet arsenal thérapeutique de pointe mais néanmoins conventionnel (fibrates, statines) il aborde dans un second temps l'état des recherches portant sur le long terme laissant apparaître de nouveaux concepts thérapeutiques faisant appel à l'utilisation des génés et par conséquent la thérapie génique. Reconnues comme figurant parmi les maladies les plus répandues dans les pays industrialisés, les maladies cardiovasculaires vont sans doute connaître dans les années venant une révolution dans leur approche thérapeutique. La déficience de certains génés pourra être corrigée par la thérapie génique et le recours médicamenteux des molécules de pointe pourra sans doute ralentir considérablement le développement de l'athérosclérose. Cet ouvrage décrit avec soin et précision les nouvelles formes de cette médecine du futur. Livrehebdo, 2001
